

Walkabout Travel Gear

Content: 38/50
Presentation: 35/50
Experience: 37/50

The Australian aboriginal walkabout tradition of crossing vast territory is encapsulated by Brad and Gia Boyle's Walkabout Travel Gear company. The adventurous outfitter's Web site showcases its merchandise catalog, organized into categories such as "Bugs" (netting and insect repellent) and "Sleep" (travel pillows and alarm clocks). The site also offers a page with link-dotted thematic odysseys, such as a tour of the real Saint Nick's Turkish stomping grounds. And The Emu's Walkabout Tips page gives travelers a chance to share such helpful suggestions as "One of the safest liquids to drink in developing countries is beer. It is too acidic for microbes to live in.... To be safe, drink beer constantly."
